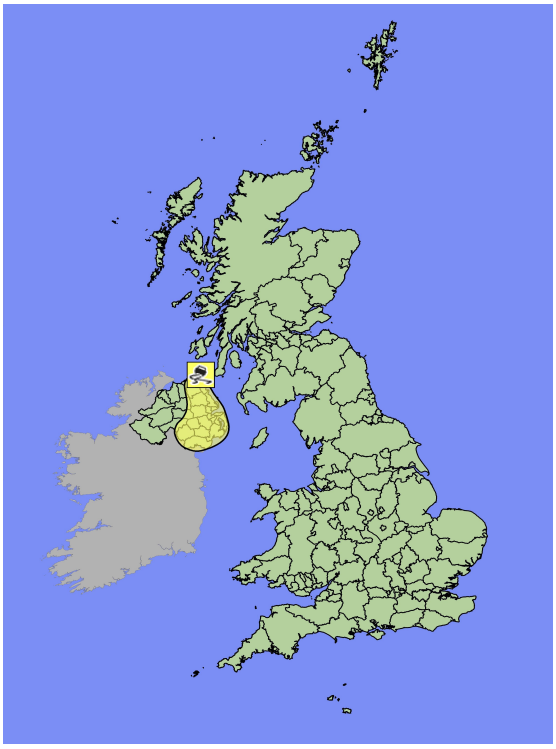
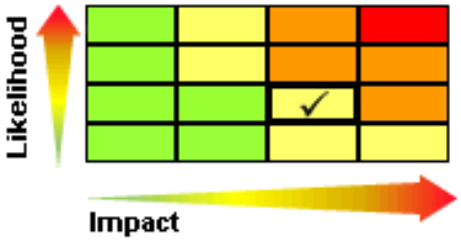
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold airmass remains in place across Northern Ireland. Further wintry showers will continue to run into eastern counties from the Irish Sea, falling as rain or sleet on coasts but snow inland and on hills. Ice is therefore likely to form on untreated surfaces and where existing snow cover re-freezes.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 12:30 on Wed, 23rd Jan 2013 until 11:00 on Thu, 24th Jan 2013

Icy stretches will continue to affect many untreated roads through Wednesday afternoon, overnight and well into Thursday morning, particularly where lying snow has frozen. In addition, sleet and snow showers will affect parts of Antrim and Down during the afternoon and evening, with 1-2 cm of fresh snow in places, mainly over the higher ground.

The public are advised to take extra care and be aware of the risk of further disruption to transport.
